A biography of the former UN Undersecretary General for Special Political Affairs describes his childhood in a hardworking family, his public service, his racial consciousness, and his battle with prejudice

Ralph Johnson Bunche was a distinguished black American whose career encompassed the roles of scholar, civil rights activist, statesman, and leader in the search for world peace and justice. This volume contains a brief chronological biography and essays analyzing the major facets of his life. Born in 1904 in Detroit and orphaned at the age of 13 in Albuquerque, he was reared in Los Angeles by his maternal grandmother, who insisted that he be taught college preparatory subjects, instead of the "practical" courses designed for black children. Subsequently his entire academic career was laced with "firsts" and honors. He was also the first black to receive the Ph.D. degree in political science from Harvard and the Nobel Peace Prize, for successfully negotiating an armistice between Israel and Egypt, Jordan, Syria, and Lebanon in 1950. ISBN 0-8419-1145-2: $36.50.

Restores the forgotten legacy of a leader for peace

The legacy of an exceptional world leader

A firsthand account of South Africa as experienced by a black American in the 1930s. Ralph Bunche, who received the Nobel Peace Prize in 1950, travelled to South Africa for three months in 1937. These are his travel notes, compiled and annotated by historian Robert R. Edgar.

Traces the life of the statesman, Black leader, scholar, and icon who was the first African American to win a Nobel Peace Prize

In this book, Jonathan Holloway explores the early lives and careers of economist Abram Harris Jr., sociologist E. Franklin Frazier, and political scientist Ralph Bunche--three black scholars who taught at Howard University during the New Deal and, together, formed the leading edge of American social science radicalism. Harris, Frazier, and Bunche represented the vanguard of the young black radical intellectual-activists who dared to criticize the NAACP for its cautious civil rights agenda and saw in the turmoil of the Great Depression an opportunity to advocate class-based solutions to what were commonly considered racial problems. Despite the broader approach they called for, both their advocates and their detractors had difficulty seeing them as anything but "black intellectuals" speaking on "black issues." A social and intellectual history of the trio, of Howard University, and of black Washington, Confronting the Veil investigates the effects of racialized thinking on Harris, Frazier, Bunche, and others who wanted to think "beyond race--who envisioned a workers' movement that would eliminate racial divisiveness and who used social science to demonstrate the ways in which race is constructed by social phenomena. Ultimately, the book sheds new light on how people have used race to constrain the possibilities of radical politics and social science thinking.

Features portraits of some six hundred noteworthy African Americans representing a wide variety of fields of endeavor.

Describes the life and accomplishments of the African American statesman who was instrumental in the founding of the United Nations and winner of the Nobel Peace Prize.
